

Veal calves endure intense confinement, chained by the neck in small crates that restrict virtually any movement. Unable to turn around or engage in any physical exercise, the calves are usually killed at four months of age.